

PROJECT
Write2Them

at Basic Military Training

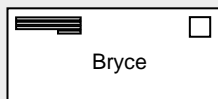

We turn email into letters from home™

Project Write2Them is a non-profit organization focused on serving new recruits and their families. Our mission is to help improve recruit's morale by making it easier for families and friends to stay in touch with them during basic training – a time when they won't have access to standard conveniences such as smart phones, email or social media. Simply put, our mission is to make sure that Mail Call is the best part of every recruit's day by turning emails into letters from home™.

"My son loved the service and others in his Flt noticed how fast he received mail, how much he was getting and how cool the format was. They then told their loved ones to sign up." – Sara, Air Force Recruit mom

About us – Project Write2Them was started by two parents who wanted to make it easier to write to their son during Basic Training at Lackland Air Force Base. Project Write2Them is staffed by volunteers and supported by a small fee for using the service, individual donations and corporate sponsors. There is absolutely no cost to the military recruits or the military service branch. Project Write2Them hopes that donations will allow us to offer this service at no cost to families soon. Since 2010, Project Write2Them has been sending letters to military basic trainees and service academy cadets.

Sign up at www.write2them.org to help make sure Mail Call is the best part of your recruit's day!

* Until Project Write2Them receives sufficient donations from individuals and corporate sponsors to cover its costs, a small service fee is required to activate the service.
